You can learn a lot from someone who wanders—not just about the places they’ve seen, but about discovering your own place in the world.

As we move through life, one truth begins to shine through: it’s not the destination that defines us, but the journey—the steps we choose, the moments we live, and the lessons we gather along the way.

Every step we take is ours to determine. The paths behind us may be marked with missteps or triumphs, but they are all part of the story that shapes who we are. Instead of dwelling on where we stumbled, we can embrace those moments as teachers—guiding lessons that help us walk more wisely into what lies ahead.

This song is for those still finding their rhythm, still learning to trust the path beneath their feet. Because in the end, we’re all travelers—each of us walking our own road, sometimes in the sun and sometimes in the rain.

Let these words walk with you, a quiet reminder that you’re not alone.

Your past steps don’t define you—they refine you. And every step you take from here forward has meaning, has purpose, and belongs exactly where it is.

"A Dance In The Rain"

[Verse 1]

I've walked through cities lit with neon dreams
And valleys where the quiet made me sing
I've chased the sun, I've followed streams
But I've learned it's not about the ending

Every mile, a lesson written in the dust
Every stranger's smile taught me to trust
Life's not a race, not a line to cross
It's a dance in the rain, a moment not lost

It's love we give, the hands we hold
Not what we earn, but the stories told
You'll find your strength where you least expect
Sometimes in kindness of strangers you've met

[Verse 2]

Mistakes? I've made more than a few
But they showed me the shape of truth
Not every question needs a reply
We don't always need to know why

[Chorus]

You don't need to know all you'll become
You're enough right now — you've just begun
Life's not a race, not a line to cross
It's a dance in the rain, a moment not lost

It's love we give, the hands we hold
Not what we earn, but the stories told
Fulfillment grows when we learn to give
And in lifting others, we start to live

[Bridge]

The seasons turn, the river bends
We break, we bloom, we start again
Letting go don't mean we're weak
Some peace is found in losing things
Don't worry about being lost on life's highway,
Your faith and moral compass, will show you the way

[Chorus]

You don't need to know all you'll become
You're enough right now — you've just begun
Life's not a race, not a line to cross
It's a dance in the rain, a moment not lost

It's love we give, the hands we hold
Not what we earn, but the stories told
Fulfillment grows when we learn to give
And in lifting others, we start to live

[Outro]

Happiness grows when you cherish today,
When you help others in a selfless way
Purpose is found in what you leave behind—
In lifting others and being kind.

So walk with wonder, and walk with grace
You're part of the stars, you've got your place
The road I leave is yours to find
Accepting your journey with an open mind
